REMOVAL OF THREE OFFICIALS SLATED, SAYS GOV. JAMES

Important Earle Administration Officials To Go Monday, It Is Stated

FAILED CONFIRMATION

Attorney General Tells Gov. James He Has Authority To Remove Them

(By International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 21.—The removal of three important Earle administration officials was today officially slated to take place Monday, according to an announcement by Gov. Arthur H. James.

They are Public Utility Commissioner John Sullivan, Liquor Control Board Chairman Leo Crossen, and State Turnpike Commissioner Edward N. Jones. The three failed of confirmation by the Senate. Governor James said an official order of removal would be handed down Monday for Crossen and Jones and a cease and desist order for Sullivan. Crossen's and Sullivan's posts pay $10,000 annually, Jones' $5,000 a year.

Governor James said that Attorney General Claude Reno had informed him that he held the authority to remove Crossen and Jones from office. Regarding Sullivan, Reno said a public utility commissioner could be removed only with the consent of the Senate, but since Sullivan had never been confirmed, in his case it was necessary merely that he be notified by an order to cease and desist from acting. Governor James added that Jones' post on the State Turnpike Commission might be left vacant for economy reasons.

Governor James said that the Attorney General had also informed him that he held the authority to remove former Governor Earle's appointee to the General State Authority and it was therefore expected that State Senator George Kunkel, Dauphin Democrat, would be replaced by a Republican, giving the authority a political complexion of five Republicans and five Democrats, which will become a Republican majority when Secretary of Internal Affairs Thomas A. Logue is replaced in May by his successor, William S. Livengood, Jr.

Governor James, after conferring with his budget secretary, Edward B. Logan, said that his budget message would probably be delivered on Monday, February 6, to the Legislature. He also added that he expected to make some announcement "within the next two weeks" on changes contemplated in the Department of Mines.

Hold Driver of Death Car For Grand Jury

The driver of a car in which two men met their death on the morning of November 13th, last, was held for action of the grand jury, when a coroner's inquisition took place in the municipal building, here, yesterday afternoon.

The one held is Mario Margolia, 53 West Chester Square, the Bronx, New York. He had been held in $2500 bail after the accident on the Lincoln Highway, two miles west of South Langhorne, in which Paul Victor Glauz, 24, and James Santner, 25, both of the Bronx, N. Y., met their death.

Margolia had a miraculous escape from injury in the crash. According to Pennsylvania Motor Police of Oxford Valley barracks, at the time of the crash, Margolia apparently became confused when he reached a fork on the Lincoln Highway two miles west of South Langhorne, where one-way traffic begins. It is stated he drove between two roads, one elevated, the other dropping down toward an underpass. The car struck a concrete abutment. Bouncing, the car pirouetted into the lower eastbound lane, crashing into a motor freight truck driven by William M. Yuenling, of Secaucus, N. J.

A fourth man in the machine, Elmer Falk, New York City, was taken to Harriman Hospital, for treatment of lacerations of the head.

Say Alleged Poison Ring Mulcted Insurance Companies

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 21.—Judge Gerald F. Flood is holding under advisement the bail petition of Herman Petrillo, Langhorne, who has been described by police as the "brains" of an alleged poison ring.

Two others held with Petrillo are Mrs. Stella Alfonsi, a former resident of Bristol, and Mrs. Carmella Favaretto. Both of the women are now residents of this city.

Five Philadelphia insurance companies are reported to have been mulcted of nearly $100,000 by the operations of an alleged arsenic-murder ring which has been under investigation since last September.

The request for an inquest over the four bodies, three of which were dug up for their graves for purposes of post-mortem examination, brings to a head a three-way investigation into the alleged poison ring.

The investigations, conducted by the District Attorney, the coroner and the police, began with the discovery of arsenic in the internal organs of Anthony Alfonsi, husband of one of the women under arrest, following his death last September. The Alfonsis lived at Ann and Belgrade streets.

Subsequently Stanley Phillips, a United States Secret Service agent investigating Petrillo for counterfeiting, revealed the Langhorne man had offered him $500 to "push Alfonsi down the cellar stairs and hit him with a sandbag, or take him out on a lonely road and make it look like a hit-and-run accident."

As the investigation proceeded the bodies of the following were dug up: Charles Ingrao, said to be the common-law husband of Mrs. Favaretto, and his son, Philip, both of whom died in 1935, and Giuseppe di Martino, who also died in 1935.

Wednesday's inquest is asked in connection with the deaths of these and of Alfonsi.

Although officials refrained from comment on the progress of the investigation last night, it was indicated that evidence had been amassed leading to the belief that the lives of at least eight others had been snuffed out to collect insurance.

Only a week ago George Myers, whose address has been kept concealed by authorities because of his value as chief witness against the accused, was kidnapped, taken for a ride for more than four hours in an automobile, bound and gagged, and finally tossed from the machine into a snow-drift. He was threatened, it is reported, with death if he testified against the three under arrest.

DOYLESTOWN TO DEDICATE NEW HOSPITAL TODAY

Institution With 21 Beds Cost Approximately $75,000, It Is Stated

EMERGENCY CASES ONLY

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 21.—The new $75,000 Doylestown Emergency Hospital building is being dedicated here this afternoon with a special ceremony and "open house" reception. This is the only hospital in the United States started entirely by women. A hospital organization was started here 32 years ago by women and women carried it on entirely ever since.

Looked upon as this historic community's outstanding asset, the new hospital, a 21-bed set-up, will be dedicated in an address by Judge Calvin S. Boyer, of the Bucks County courts. The new building was made possible through a charitable bequest of the late Isaiah W. Closson, Solebury Township cattle dealer, who bequeathed practically his entire estate to the hospital.

The hospital, as has been the policy for years, will continue as an emergency hospital with no major surgical cases handled.

The hospital idea was started here 32 years ago today when a group of women in the Village Improvement Association, one of the oldest and largest women's clubs in Pennsylvania, called a local meeting to discuss the need of hospitalization here. A fund was started and in July, 1916, the V. I. A. secured a Visiting Nurse and later, through the local chapter of the American Red Cross, hospital facilities were established in two emergency rooms.

Fifteen years later the trustees purchased the Livezey property at Oakland avenue and Pine street, where a hospital was planned with two beds, a crib and one nurse. A modernly equipped operating room was added and the hospital work carried on in this building until the present time. The patients will be moved into the new hospital during the next week.

CHILD AND HIS NEEDS DISCUSSED FOR P. T. A.

Rev. Clifford G. Pollock, Morrisville, is Speaker to East Bristol Township Ass'n

W. RITTLER PRESIDES

The Rev. Clifford G. Pollock, pastor of Morrisville Presbyterian Church, addressed members of East Bristol Township P. T. A., Thursday evening, in the Edgely school house after the business meeting.

The Rev. Pollock spoke about "The Child and His Needs," saying the simple and hardest task in the world today is the handling of people, the handling of children. Driving through Virginia, on a trip, he told of an incident of a family dining in a restaurant, a father and mother and four children. After the father was seated he began doing something, and a child imitated him. Then his father rebuked him. "Do what is right then your child won't have to be continually rebuked."

Then he stated that Latin is the dearest language—"first it killed the Romans and now it's killing me. One teacher will kill a subject and one will make the subject live; art, music, and nature for example. You can teach a child for hours at a time from the books, yet if you would take the child to a musical, or a walk in the woods or to an art gallery, he would learn more in one hour than you could possibly teach him in 12 hours. It depends on the procedure you follow."

The Rev. Pollock then stated that the purpose of education is threefold in its make-up. "It enables a boy or girl to think for himself or herself. Education enables a boy or girl to meet the circumstances which arise. Education enables the boy or girl to make his or her place in this world. Education can do those three things for a child."

The age of six to 18 is that of imitation—the hero worship age. "They don't want to be themselves, they want to be someone else."

"Too many parents say 'Don't do this' and 'Don't do that.' Be careful how you throttle their desires. Give them something to do. Give them something positive to cling to, something to hold. Let them think they are doing something whether or not they really are. Overcome the idea of punishment. Substitute a 'do' philosophy for a 'don't' philosophy. Then comes the age of great interests, which are constantly waxing and waning. The child may have six or seven different hobbies in one month."

"Then there is the age of approval. The desires of receiving a certain amount of approval. We are all seeking approval in this world. Too many of us don't give it, condemning everything rather than praising those who are doing a good piece of work. A pat on the back helps with all of us. If they do something commendable give them credit for it. A child needs that approval to get ahead in this world."

The Rev. Pollock also spoke on "Sex Education," stating that some of the biggest colleges teach it now, and it would be a good thing for all colleges to teach it.

He also recommended the Vacation Bible School in the Summer for the children. The school, the parents and the church will help the child to adjust himself most effectively in his needs.

President Walter Rittler presided, with Secretary Walter Miller reading the Scripture and the minutes of the previous meeting. The treasurer announced there is a balance in the bank of $35.95 after the expenses of the Christmas party were taken care of. Nominations of officers will take place at the next meeting, February 15th. R. J. Martini, Bristol, will entertain with 30 or 40 pupils at this meeting and the public is invited. Refreshments of coffee and pie were partaken, which were served by Mrs. Rittler, Mrs. Stradling, Mrs. Wheeler, Mrs. Bright, and Mrs. Hibbs.

Mr. Rittler announced that the first annual Bucks County Council celebration of Founders Day of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers will be held in the Bensalem Township high school auditorium on Thursday evening, February 16th, at eight o'clock.

German Situation

By Pierre J. Huxs
Berlin, Jan. 21.—Undisputed master of German finance as well as all other factors of the third Reich, Chancellor Adolph Hitler strengthened the military preparedness of the nation today and launched anew his diplomatic "drive to the east."

The Fuehrer lost no time in giving to the world new evidence of Germany's determination to proceed unswervingly in the path of Europe's mystery he outlined years ago in his book "My Struggle."

At the same time, he took a step toward improving strained relations with the United States by appointing Captain Fritz Wiedmann, his Bavarian adjutant and close advisor to the post of German Consul General in San Francisco.

Hitler's move to strengthen the military preparedness of Germany was taken in the form of an official decree announcing that all men completing their regular term of military service will be organized into defense detachments. These in turn will be incorporated into the Nazi storm troops—a step primarily designed to bolster the Fuehrer's private army and insure unswerving loyalty by millions of uniformed Nazis. The decree marked another step in Hitler's campaign to reduce the powers of the military clique which rules the regular German army.

The diplomatic drive to the east was resumed with a lengthy conversation between Czechoslovakian Foreign Minister Chvalkovsky and German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop.

PANNING VITAMINS

One of a number of substitutes for our vanished and recently much-lamented frontiers is furnished, just for example, by vitamins, those mysterious qualities present to some extent in most foods but capable in concentration of exercising all sorts of beneficial influences on bodily chemistry.

The boy who in '49 might have set out with a banjo on his knee to pan wealth from the gold-bearing sands of California now sets out for college, also with a banjo on his knee, studies chemistry and ends up by panning vitamins from various neglected left-overs of human diet.
Sudden fame is as possible in the one case as in the other, and sudden wealth is by no means impossible on this and other frontiers of the domain of science.

Nor are opportunities for sharing in the benefits of such pioneering confined solely to the discoverers, any more than the first explorers were exclusive beneficiaries of the riches of the old frontiers. Recently it was announced that the livers of pilchards and greyfish, abundant but more or less inedible denizens of the ocean off British Columbia, have been found incomparably richer than any other known source in Vitamins A and D.

Now there is talk of a "billion dollar industry," to be built on the basis of this discovery. Instead of a gold rush, there is to be a pilchard and grey-fish rush.

To some it will not sound so romantic, but that is a matter of taste, just as pioneering was a taste, even in '49. The fact remains that the frontiers of man's contact with Nature still exist, still are expanding and still are fruitful of fame and fortune for those who will seek them.

THE CAVE MAN

The cave man always did come in for a deal of attention. It is a popular notion that he was free and magnificently brutal. But it was only recently that scientists arrived at the conclusion that he was intelligent, so intelligent that he would rate a better IQ than many of his supposedly more civilized descendants.

The suggestion may seem repel-lant for most persons are loath to admit that in intelligence they are inferior. But when facts are scrutinized it is found that a considerable number show the cave man to have been a superior being in many ways.

So far as we know, he did not for one thing, indulge in, or succumb to, what moderns have named "bunk." He bought nothing from high-pressure salesmen. He conducted no moral crusade. He did not believe that clothes make the man. He pretended no sophistication.

He never got into a rut or became the slave of routine. He made war, but when he did he did not talk about abstractions. He preferred abstraction to the crowd. He was never known to have made laws which he knew he could not live up to, and custom and tradition never dictated his manner of living.

The cave man accepted life on the simplest and most honest terms.
Living on an earth much fiercer than it is today, he yet managed to avoid being either too glib or silly. He lived, begot children and died. In the end modern man does no more. If he was not more intelligent than modern man, at least he gave his native intelligence more freedom in dealing with life.

In a controversy with other British titles who refuse to curtsy to her, we're for Wally, as she worked for hers.

The new building, of brick Colonial type construction is one of the finest equipped in this section of the state.
Many organizations and individuals have assisted in making the equipment of the hospital the finest obtainable.
Through a yearly campaign conducted by the women of the Village Improvement Association, the hospital is maintained, in addition to fees received at the hospital.

Located in the most picturesque section of the County Seat of Bucks the new hospital building has been pronounced by State and national hospital authorities as one of the finest and most unique of its type in the United States.

The president of the Village Improvement Association, Mrs. J. Purdy

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY" by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XXVIII

Mattresser slipped from the wall and crossed over to the door of the lodge.

"I will come and look at it," he said. "I can promise no more. Your hospitality is too overpowering."
"At least," his host insisted, "you must drink one glass of my Bern-castler Doctor which is served with it. It has lain in my cellars since the lodge itself was built."

The two resumed their places at the table. Mattresser sipped his wine. His host watched his appreciation with obvious pleasure.

"Forty bottles only I have left," he sighed. "Each one is the same—mellow, soft, with no touch of acidity or sweetness. It would give me great pleasure if we finished them all before you my guests, left me."

Once more the horn was blowing and there were several hours during that afternoon when Mattresser forgot the real drama of the day, completely absorbed as he was in its less momentous incidents. He was in a fine mood that night when he took his place at the dinner table on the left hand of his host.

"You find our sport good, Lord Mattresser?" was one of the Count's first questions.

"I have never had a more enjoyable day in my life," his visitor replied. "I think I may say that I have shot every variety of game and beast but never under such conditions."

Count Helm showed his gratification.

"It is a happy augury," he declared, "that we have all mingled together pleasantly and happily in sport. I hope and pray that before this evening is over we who appreciate the fellowship principle in sport may have drawn even closer together."

The servants placed at intervals along the table three huge bottles of wine. Other menials were distributing richly chased glasses of many colors from a tray which appeared to be of solid gold.

"I am offering you the tribute of priceless wines, my friends," their host declared. "These three bottles are trimagnums, or Rehobams I think they are sometimes called, of Johannsburg, the famous 1904 vintage. With my glass in my hand and a burning wish in my heart, I ask you all to rise to your feet and drink with me to the hope that during this hour we may write a bright new page or two in history and find the way to establish the thing we all desire—the peace of Europe. I now invite Herr Hellstern, the Leader of Germany, to offer you a few words of explanation as to his present attitude."

Count Helm resumed his seat.
Hellstern drank briskly from his glass before he rose. It was curious how the man seemed to have shrunk physically during the last twelve months of overwhelming anxieties.
"Count Helm," he said, "and delegates of this small conference: It is I who am responsible for the rearming of the German nation. I was the first to see that the way to peace could never lie through disarmament.
Disarmament is a logical impossibility. Great Britain recently proved that point. The disarmament policy failed and so Great Britain was compelled to build planes and ships with feverish haste just when so much of the best materials in the German army is today invincible. But I found, as others have found before me, that when I created it I created a Frankenstein. The new German army is indeed invincible, but it would fight for three things only—God, Germany and an Imperial ruler. I foresaw this years ago and I saw the truth. I saw it in the days when England first commenced her consideration of this great gesture to be announced here and which is the only thing which may keep the German people from war and make the German people a joyous and a peaceful nation. I now, my friends, put that gesture into plain words: England, under certain conditions, has offered to restore our colonies."

A mittagsessen—it would have been absurd to have called it a luncheon—was served in a mountain chalet precisely at midday, from which Mattresser escaped at the earliest possible opportunity. His chair was near the door, the room was obscured with tobacco smoke and a drifting mist before the meal was half finished, and so he slipped out unnoticed. He threw over his shoulders his mackintosh, lit his pipe and sat on a gray stone wall looking over the rolling panorama of woods which seemed to reach to the skies. A brown dog of the cocker spaniel type, which had stuck to him throughout the morning as though it had found a long lost master, came and rested its chin against his hand, looking up at him.
He patted its head. The dog licked him gratefully.

"Little brown dog," he murmured,
"I wish I could see through that fog inside and know what it all means."

The dog wagged its tail vigorously. Its paws now were on Mattresser's leather breeches. Count Helm stood in the door of the lodge and called out.

"Lord Mattresser, you must not miss our national dish—hot boar's head!"

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

There was an undertone of voices, of murmurs surcharged with emotion, of suppressed drama forcing its way into some sort of expression.
Then once more the deepest silence.

"Germany asks no more," continued Hellstern. "There may be a shade of bitterness in what I say when I tell you that that offer would never be made to me. It would only be made to a Germany which England considered in a position to hold its own in dignity and honor among the nations. That is one reason why my resignation as Leader of Germany is today in the hands of Count Helm."

"I look not so far away from home and I see the misfortunes which have befallen the man whose career has so often been likened to my own. A dubious war will bring any idol in the world tottering from his place in the people's hearts. A dubious war is a thing with which I will have nothing to do. I have struck my blow for Germany. What I have done I have done. It is for Count Helm, if the people trust him and I know they will, to carry on."

Notwithstanding their host's expressed wish that approval or disapproval of what was said should be veiled in discreet silence, there were little murmurs of amazement as Germany's ex-ruler resumed his seat. Count Helm's long fingers stole into the silver cup by his side into which he had dropped several screwed up pieces of paper. He drew out one of them.

"Gentlemen," he announced, "we shall now listen to Signor Corletti." Corletti rose promptly to his feet.
He was at once suave, convincing and fluent.

"Sir," he began with a bow to his host, "I have this much to say to you on behalf of my beloved Italy.
We have derived some incalculable benefits from the bold and astute policy of our Premier, but once more Roman history must record the story of a man of genius who, after years of success, leaped into slippery places and, unused to failure, in a spirit of fierce obstinacy, incurred the great displeasure of a still grateful people."

"Italy now calls for Imperial rule.
It pins its faith to the youth of our present Royal Family, whose voice is already being heard in strong dissent to a continuation of our imprudent colonial policy. I have to announce at this gathering that King Victor Emmanuel has already signed his abdication to be made use of at the proper moment, and that the Crown Prince will—when that moment comes—be proclaimed King of Italy."

There was a solemn but entirely favorable silence. Count Helm's fingers once more searched inside the cup. This time he read out the name of General Besserley, the American representative. Besserley rose and bowed to Count Helm. The few words he spoke pleased everybody.

"I feel that I am here by courtesy," he said. "For, as you know, the United States long ago gave up the idea of taking any active part in European politics. We love you just as much—we are fond of you all, and where we can help without imperiling the interests of our own people, we want to help. Peace is the greatest blessing in the world.
The vast majority of people has no sympathy for aggressive nations.
The only message I have to give you is this:

"If you bring your magnificent plan to a successful conclusion, if this splendid offer by Great Britain is accepted in the right spirit and carried out, if it is clear that the cause of peace will benefit, I am confident that neither our present Administration, nor any future Administration, will refuse to accept the task which you have hinted at,
and that is: to adjudicate upon any minor differences that might arise in the formation of the pact." With that the American paused; then continued impressively:

"The plan which Count Helm, I happen to know, has in mind seems

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND

High adventure along one of the world's last frontiers is thrillingly depicted in "Heart of the North," the Warner Bros. picture in Technicolor of a tale of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police which comes to the Grand Theatre today.

Authentic in every detail, the picture "debunks" many a widespread misconception of the operations and daily existence of the Canadian "Mounties," but the actuality, as vividly portrayed in "Heart of the North" turns out to be even more thrilling and certainly more interesting than the popular delusions.

Constance Bennett is starred in Universal's "Service De Luxe," which comes to the Grand Theatre Sunday, and which introduces to American motion picture audiences a screen newcomer, Vincent Price.

Price is no stranger to Broadway, however. He gained a high reputation as an actor of exceeding merit through his two-year performance of the role of Albert opposite Helen Hayes in "Victoria Regina."

Price makes his cinema debut in a vehicle especially tailored for himself and Miss Bennett, "Service De Luxe" was designed to launch the new leading man under the best possible auspices. The picture casts him as a naive, up-state boy who comes to New York trying to peddle a tractor invention, and falling easily and quickly into the hands of designing women.

Miss Bennett will be seen as Dorothy Madison, head of the Dorothy Madison Service, a firm which performs all kinds of personal services for its clients.

BRISTOL

Monogram's "Tough Kid," a fast moving Frankie Darro picture, opens Sunday at the Bristol Theatre.

The second of the "Murphy Family" series, "Tough Kid" concerns two brothers—Red, Murphy, heavyweight fighter who is soon to meet the champion for the world's title, and Skipper, his kid brother, who helps him train, and idolizes him.

It is "Morn" who holds the family together when Skipper discovers what he cannot believe, that Red is going to throw the fight for money, and it is she who inspires the boy to help Red by tracking down his betrayers.

The fascinating mystery as to what takes place far beneath the surface of the sea is solved to a great extent by "Titans of the Deep," a new picture which opens at the Bristol Theatre Sunday.

"Ride a Crooked Mile" is one film which must be emphatically labelled as something different. It is different in its vivid background, which combines a Russian bandits' stronghold with a Kansas cattle ranch. It is different in its heated conflict between old-world buccaneering and American youth. And finally, it is different in its main character—an untamed ex-Cossack who tries to continue his wild career in his adopted country and rule his Americanized son by gangster methods.

The latest attraction at the Bristol Theatre, which opened last night, features Akim Tamiroff in the most colorful role he has yet played. He is the Cossack chieftain, blustering, fearless, terrible, who is completely dumbfounded when the authority of the United States government and the will of his high-spirited son stops his wild career of super-rustling.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS LOSE TO NJSD TEAM BY SCORE OF 32 TO 25

Victory Marks Fifth Straight Setback for Bristol Team By The Mute Aggregation

'CARDS' COULDN'T CLICK

Visitors Passed and Shot With Great Skill Against Home Team

Coach Fred Burbank's New Jersey School for the Deaf still maintains its supremacy over Bristol High basketball teams by scoring a 32-25 win over the Cardinal and Gray passers on the local court last night.

The victory marked the fifth in a row without a setback against Bristol teams for the Mutes over a three year period. At the same time, and what's more important than that to the Cards, was the fact that the defeat broke the Red and Gray winning streak of four straight, which they had compiled since the season's opener against Bensalem two weeks ago.

Coach Steve Juenger's boys couldn't seem to find the formula in this tilt that moulded them their quartet of victories thus far and from the time the Deaf boys took the lead mid-way in the opening period, there seemed to be a certain hunch in the atmosphere that it just wasn't in the Cards for them to defeat the invaders for their fifth consecutive triumph of the current season.

The Mutes of coach Fred Burbank passed with uncanny skill and dropped in double deekers from all over the court on both long and short set shots, fade-away fines, push-ups, and pivot shots to roll up their score, which, incidentally was the lowest total they ever garnered against a Bristol team, if that is any consolation. Moreover, their rangy guards picked the ball off the backboard practically every time it rebounded from there, and though Bristol's passing was not up to standard by any means, it was considerably hampered by their height handicap. For while some passes went wild, many were intercepted by the big defensemen of the Deaf School.

Except from the beginning when Bristol hopped off to take the lead, only in the fourth period did they exhibit their real scoring punch. At that time they picked up eight tallies in rapid succession before the Mutes could garner another point. This reduced the visitors lead from 27-14, to 27-22, and called for the return of three varsity men from the Mutes' bench as coach Burbank became fearful of another last minute rally such as Morrisville put on to deadlock the score just before the game ended and thus sent it into extra periods.

But the insertion of this trio put the Deaf School back on stable ground and they proceeded to rack up five points to make the score read, 32-22, before Bristol finished up with three tallies in the last minute or so of the game.

BENSALEM LOSES TILT TO BUCCANEERS, 27-20

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 21—The jinx is broken. The Buckingham Buccaneers have at last shattered their losing streak of 13 consecutive Lower Bucks County League games, extending over a period of two seasons, when they upset the Bensalem Owls here last night, 27-20.

Previous to last night's fray, Buckingham had gone down to defeat three times this season in loop tilt, but used the Owls to step up from the circuit's basement and to clinch into fifth place, the first time they have emerged from the cellar since they joined the league last season.

The tilt was a rough and tumble affair from the opening whistle until the close of the game. This was signified by the fact that a total of 38 foul shots were taken with Buckingham the recipient of no less than 25 of them and Bensalem, 13. Of those tries, Bensalem scored only four while the Bucks counted 9. However, this difference of five would still have been short of a victory for the Owls. During the melee, three of the Owl varsity stars—Bob Whyte, Norm Tettemer and Harry Baker—were all tossed out of the contest via the foul route.

OWLS' SEXTET WINS IN LAST MINUTE OF PLAY

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 21—Glyndie Applin, star forward for coach Helen Smith's Bensalem Owl basketball sextet, became the heroine of her teammates and coach, when she dropped in a double decker under the net of her own basket just as the whistle blew to give the Owlets a thrilling, 19-18 win over the inspired Buckingham Dogs in the Owlets court here last night.

Through her role in this thrill-packed court tilt, not only did Glyndie win the admiration of her teammates and coach, but she also won for herself a niche in the hearts of the many Bensalem rooters who were on hand to witness the sensational ball game.

Bensalem took the lead from the outset of the game, but Buckingham fought back to knot the score at the end of the period, and went ahead at half-time, 11-9. Then in a see-saw second half, the Owlets came from behind to score the winning points by Applin just as the contest ended.

Buckingham outscored Bensalem from the floor, 16-14, but the Blue and Grey maidens made up the difference from the foul line by counting five of their 14 free tosses as compared to only two out of seven for Buckingham.

SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 21—Coach Jimmy Doheny and his Fallsington Falcons received a severe jolt to their title hopes when the Southampton Greyhounds scored a 27-25 win over them in a "sudden death" extra period in a Lower Bucks County League game played here last night.

CARDINAL AND GRAY GIRLS WIN EASILY OVER MUTES

Rolling up a 13-1 score at the close of the first period, and stretching it to 23-6 at half-time, the Cardinal and Gray lassies of Bristol High scored an easy win over the invading New Jersey School for the Deaf girls here last night, 29-13.

The Deaf sextet outscored Bristol in the last half, 7-6, but that was mainly due to the fact that Coach Peg Royer inserted her third team into the contest for experience during the entire third period in which N. J. S. D. outscored the local girls, 3-2, and tied them, 4-4, in the last period. However, they were so far behind that three times their last half total would not have given them a victory anyway, so Bristol fans had nothing to worry over.

After piling up a 17-4 score mid-way in the second period, Coach Royer took out the entire varsity six in favor of the second team who finished up the quarter with six tallies to two for the gawky way to the third team during the Mutes. Of course, the second team third session and the varsity finished up what they started to undertake, in the final period. The only points scored by the third team in the third period was a field goal by Helen Van Aken.

Ann Warwick started Bristol off with a shot under the basket, after which Doris Stewart also counted under the net. Then Captain Pearl Roth sank a foul for the Mutes' only point in the first period. After that, Ethel Linck and Doris Stewart counted a pair of twin-pointers each in rapid style, with the former also inserting a foul goal during the scoring spree. Rebecca Fort scored a foul, reducing the lead to 13-2, but a pair of field goals by Stewart mounted Bristol's margin to 17-2 before Roth scored the first two-pointers for the invaders. She also scored one just before the half ended following a trio of double-deckers by Elizabeth Delker and Emma Sharp. Delker scored two of them and Sharp the other.

Doris Stewart led Bristol's point gatherers with 12 tallies, closely follower by Ethel Linck who had 9. For the losers, it was Captain Pearl Roth, with five points, showing the way.

NEW RULE FOR SILK MARKINGS PROTECTS THE BUYING PUBLIC

By Miss Edna Stephany

New rules for silk buyers and sellers, issued by the Federal Trade Commission on November 4, now permit silk consumers to buy with both eyes open and their blindfolds removed.

A fabric which contains silk, that is, the natural fiber derived from the cocoon of the silkworm, (1) must be identified so as to disclose the fact that it contains silk, (2) may not be sold as something other than silk, (3) may not be sold in any manner that might be misleading or deceptive.

Fabrics made from the waste incident to the manufacture of silk must be sold as either "silk waste" or "silk

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Crosetti

Star infielder of the New York Yankees, Frank Crosetti, and his recent bride discard their Michigan license plates and put on a California tag boosting the Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco, his home town.

noil." Any fabrics containing silk waste must disclose this fact.

Silk, Pure Silk, All Silk, Pure Dye Silk, or any similar term which indicates that a fabric is made only of silk may not be applied to any fabric which is not made only of silk. Dyeing and finishing materials may be added to these silks, however, so long as they do not constitute more than 15 percent by weight of a black silk fabric, or more than 10 percent by weight of any other silk fabric. Metallic weighting of any kind in a silk fabric disqualifies it from being called by one of these terms.

Weighted silk must indicate how much weighting it contains. For example, silk containing 25 per cent of weighting material should have on its label a legend which reads like this: "Silk, Weighted 25 Percent." Manufacturers may, if they wish, indicate that the silk weighting ranges between a maximum and a minimum percent. In this case, the label would read: "Silk, Weighted Between 25 and 50 Percent." Rules which apply to weighting of materials also apply to any other non-fibrous materials added to the silk.

Fabric mixtures containing silk must indicate the fibers contained in the order of their importance. For example: a silk, cotton, and wool mixture should be labeled, "Silk, Cotton, Wool," if its largest constituent is silk, the next largest cotton, and the other constituent wool.

Any fabric which simulates silk must indicate clearly what it actually is, so that no one may be misled into believing that it is silk.

Deteriorated or damaged silk must be sold as such.

It would be a good practice, the Commission said, if the exact percentage of each kind of fiber in a fabric mixture was indicated on the label.

Another practice the silk trade might adopt, the Commission said, would be to use the word, silk, in connection with every weave that is associated in consumer minds with silk. Thus, when crepe is being sold, it should be referred to as silk crepe, chiffon should be called silk chiffon, satin should be called silk satin and taffeta, silk taffeta.

Finally, the Commission said, consumers would be grateful if the silk trade would indicate on its labels and in its advertisements just how they should wash, clean, and take care of silk. It is our duty as consumers to insist upon such information.
